

Workshop Overview

As a leader, you create strategies based on customer need and market opportunity, enabled through organizational capabilities. Success is determined by how well your business executes the strategies, and responds to changing customer requirements as market conditions shift.

In today's fast-paced environment, three organizational capabilities are critical for sustained success. These critical success factors are:

- Adaptive organizational culture that embraces challenges and new ways of working and behaving
- Effective problem-solving skills that use creativity and diverse perspectives to identify high-impact solutions
- Engaged employees who collaborate to develop innovative ideas into actions that create business value

An adaptive organizational culture is characterized by constructive, goal-oriented behaviors which creates an environment that enables an organization's ability to innovate. High performing organizations also leverage sound repeatable problem-solving methodologies to generate new ideas that are efficiently moved to implemented actions.

Does your business have these critical capabilities? How do you measure these capabilities in your company? Do you know the leadership behaviors that support these capabilities and enable performance in your business?

The Path Forward team can help you understand and develop these capabilities for your team, organization or business. Our team has extensive global experience facilitating business transformation initiatives.
